"I have two mothers who divorced when I was eleven, but before that they were together for almost twenty years and to this day remain ridiculously close friends. I also have a brother who is seven years older than me and was among the first generations of children born into 'out' gay families. When I was younger everyone at my elementary school always asked, 'How were you born by two mothers?' I would always tell them 'Both my parents gave birth to half of me and then the doctors sewed me up the middle.'"
