"I am only biologically related to one parent— you see, I have two moms. One of my moms I have no biological connection to. I don't have her eyes, her nose, or her hair, but she couldn't be any more my mom if we were biologically related. She takes care of me when I'm sick, helps me with my homework, tells me what clothes I can and cannot wear, and she loves me just like moms do.

People are afraid of things they don't understand. People yell at us, throw rocks at us, and vandalize our house simply because we're different. But what they don't understand is that we're a family filled with love, respect, and commitment. For anyone who lends an ear, I will proudly tell them everything about my family, how great we are, and how proud I am of my community."
